Bridging the gap with flexworkers

HP Flexworker Solutions for home office, branch office, and mobile field workers

Now available within your HP Managed Print Services (MPS) contract

What if you could…

- Give remote workers a better, customized experience with simplified management and ordering of supplies?
- Enable your print IT department to manage supplies for your entire fleet through central billing and consolidated reporting?
- Save costs by letting users purchase supplies via a corporate price list versus making expensive retail purchases?

Meeting the needs of the evolving workplace

In today's dynamic and evolving workplace, telecommuting and alternate work locations are becoming more and more common across industries. As an enterprise or large organization, you probably have your fair share of flexworkers—home office workers, branch/mobile field workers, remote workers, and teleworkers. Often, these employees' printers are not part of your MPS contract.

So not only do you lack visibility into how those printers are being used and which supplies flexworkers are purchasing, but they in turn cannot take advantage of the cost savings available with contracted supply rates.

Benefits for your organization

With HP Flexworker Solutions, your remote workers and branch offices can now be included in your MPS contract. You get a complete, consistent, and globally available MPS solution with the following advantages.

Simplified, managed experience
HP Flexworker Solutions enable you to give your remote workers a better, customized, and more convenient experience with simplified management and ordering of supplies.

Better control
HP Flexworker Solutions give you visibility into and better control over the supply management process for your flexworkers. In addition, your print IT department can manage supplies for your entire fleet through central billing and consolidated reporting.
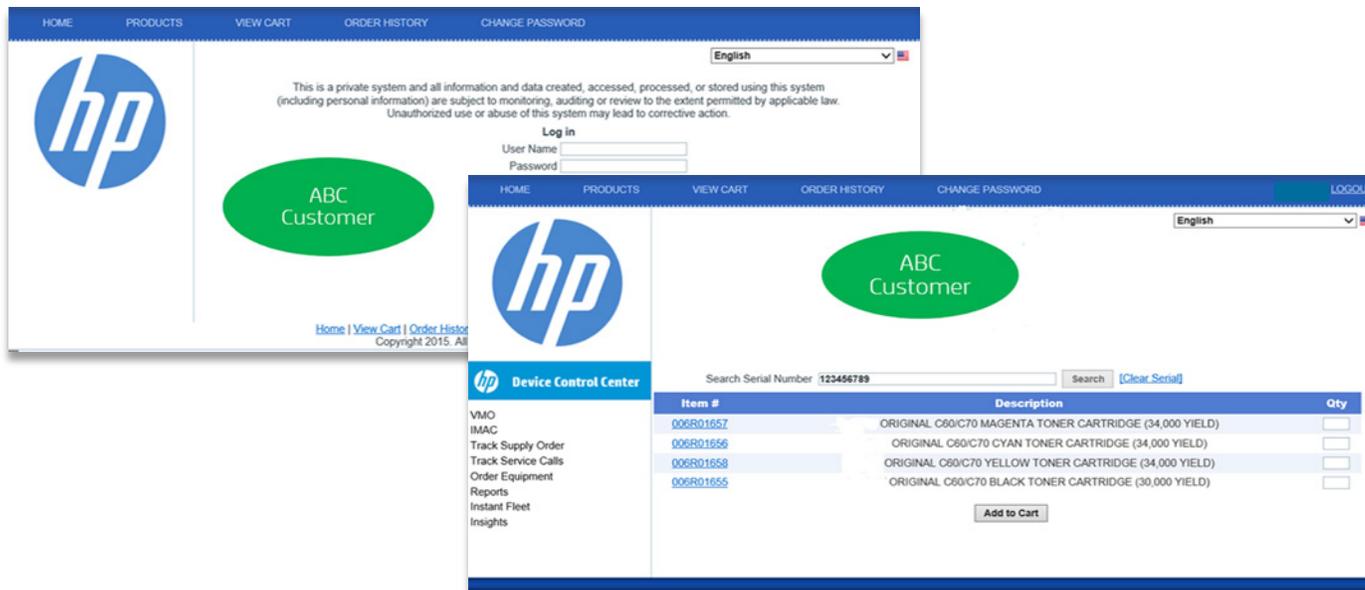

Cost savings
With HP Flexworker Solutions, your remote employees can purchase OEM supplies at your MPS contracted rates. As a result, you'll save costs as well as predict and manage spending by letting users purchase supplies via a corporate price list versus making expensive retail purchases. And accounting will spend less time processing reimbursement requests.

Benefits for flexworkers

Remote workers will enjoy the convenient ordering options available through your MPS contract. They no longer have to travel to the store or spend time online searching for the right type of supplies (along with the right model numbers) for those supplies. What's more, they won't need to worry about filling out and submitting expense reports for reimbursement—or even incurring those costs in the first place.

Customized portal

HP Flexworker Solutions includes a supplies portal for your employees. You can customize this portal to your specifications, including your corporate or organization's logo. This customized portal provides users with their own unique login that will show only their printers. So they'll see the specific supplies and the correct model numbers, without searching through hundreds of supplies or having to remember SKUs—making it quick and easy for them to order exactly what they need.

"The consumerization of IT is being driven by mobility, and that change is huge. Connecting employees, devices, and processes has never been more important. As a result, the supporting IT landscape is also having to alter dramatically."
